What Is a Strategic Default on a House? | realtor.com®

A strategic default is the decision by a borrower to stop making payments on a debt, despite having the financial ability to make the payments. This is particularly associated with residential and commercial mortgages, in which case it usually occurs after a substantial drop in the house's price such that the debt owed is greater than the value of the property — the property has negative equity or is underwater — and is expected to remain so for the foreseeable future, such as following ...

Strategic default - Wikipedia

A strategic default is a process that begins with a decision by a property owner to walk away from his mortgage. The most common reason for a strategic default is that the value of the property has dropped below the amount owed on the mortgage. This is referred to as "negative equity" or being "underwater."
