Christiane NordHeidelberg/Vienna. As a text-type in their own right, titles and headings are intended to achieve six functions: distinctive, metatextual, phatic, referential, expressive, and appellative. Taking as a point of departure the hypothesis that translated texts have to "function" in the target situation for which they are produced by serving the purpose (s) they are intended for (which may or may not be the "same" as those of the source text), it is argued that the translator has ...
