Okay, your vehicle's battery has been run down by the cranking without starting of the engine. If the battery was on the verge of failing before the no start, I would recommend replacing it at this point. If it was a good strong battery before the no start, then I would recommend getting a good recharge on it.

Will Not Start After Changing Spark Plugs

Try to start the engine and watch for a spark between the wire and the plug. Replace the spark plug wire with a new one if it shocked you through the insulation. Remove the spark plug using the spark plug wrench and replace it with a new one if there was a spark. Try to start the engine.

How to Troubleshoot a Small Gas Engine That Won't Start ...

Sometimes, the starter motor won't produce any sounds, not even a click, when you try to start the engine. This could mean the pinion gear got stuck at the flywheel ring gear. With a manual transmission, it's easier to verify this. Set the transmission to gear and rock the vehicle a few times.

My Engine Won't Turn Over - AxleAddict - A community of ...

A dead battery is the most common reason why engines fail to start up. A common reason for batteries to fail is drain. Your car's battery typically expends a small portion of its storage to start your car up, and then recharges from your alternator as you move.

Car Won't Start, What's The Cause | Fiix

The reason why the start-stop system does not function can be due to the interaction between both of these essential systems. The battery management switches off the start-stop function. The top priority for any battery is to start the engine. However, if the battery only has a low charge, the Battery Management System (BMS) switches off the start-stop function to enable the engine to be started.

Reasons why the start-stop system does not work

I read somewhere that while a 'normal' car's engine would start up about 50,000 times during the car's life, on a stop-start car, that figure would be around 500,000. To make all those starts seamless, the stop-start won't kick in if it detects the battery is dying and it's going to struggle to restart the car.

Expert advice: why stop-start may not work - Green Flag

If you think it might be flooded, try pressing the accelerator pedal to the floor while you briefly try and start the engine for a few seconds. Do not try and start for more than a few seconds as you risk flattening the battery or damaging the starter motor. Once it starts, allow it to idle for a few minutes – do not leave unattended.

Help! My car won't start, what do I do? | RAC Drive

You will have to start from scratch, pull all plugs and check for damage, is there's no damage remove the valve cover and turn the engine by hand until the #1 piston is at tdc, and then move the cam to the tdc position, making sure both intake and exhaust valves are closed, then reinstall the belt and the spark plugs, and attempt starting

What are the reasons the engine doesn't start: There are a number of reasons if your car or bike's engine doesn't start. We can split these into the issues related to the electrical system, fuel system (Petrol / Diesel) or a mechanical breakdown inside the engine.

Troubleshooting Guide: Top 10 reasons why the engine doesn't ...

If the engine has not started after several attempts, you can close the raw-water intake seacock, but you must be prepared to open it immediately if the engine starts, otherwise you may ruin the impeller. Diesel engines used to need three things to run: air, fuel, and compression.
