The Rough Guide To Beijing

What to see in Beijing. The place to start exploring is Tian'anmen Square, geographical and psychological centre of the city, where a cluster of important sights can be seen in a day, although the Forbidden City, at the north end of the square, deserves a day, or even several, all to itself. Heading north brings you to a city section with a more traditional and human feel, with some magnificent parks, palaces and temples, some of them in the hutongs.

The climate varies a fair bit from north to south: Shandong's is similar to that of Beijing; while the Yangzi River region, despite being low-lying and far from the northern plains, is unpleasantly cold and damp in winter, yet also unbearably hot and sticky during the summer - Nanjing's reputation as one of the "three furnaces" of China is well justified.
