Tips for Micro Engineering Turnouts | DCC Guy

lancemindheim.com My product of choice when it comes to turnouts are those from Micro Engineering. They are mechanically sound, highly detailed, and the points are spring loaded allowing them to be thrown with a simple flip of the finger. As solid as they are, there are a few enhancements that make a good part even better.

Burying a micro switch is more work, but the switch will last practically forever. For electrically powered turnouts, it is common practice to use contacts built into the switch machine or add a micro switch if no contacts are available. With typical power routed turnouts, the reliability conscientious modeler is faced with dilemma.

Ladder Track System Turnouts - Micro Engineering

Micro Engineering Turnout Frog Wire. Jim Exler, Nampa, ID June 5, 2019 . Connecting a wire to the ME cast frog can be a challenge. This is my idea and it seems to work. 1. First I drilled a 0.9 mm hole down through the frog at its narrowest point. I want easy access and the least amount of metal in the frog that I have to heat for the solder joint. I decided on 20 gauge (0.032") solid wire ...

Perhaps like me you overlooked the ad that Micro Engineering had in MR about their new yard ladder system. Their website (which seems last updated in 2014) is silent about it but it looks like a most interesting way to address the long standing challenge of getting the most yard for your space. All the turnouts are #5s but each is of a different geometry so that they fit together. I will be ...

Micro Engineering's new yard ladder system of turnouts ...

This unique system of five different #5 turnouts allows you to make more compact yards in a given space. The system includes curved diverging track turnouts, which allow a higher ladder track angle, several lapped turnouts and a standard #5 turnout. Micro Engineering's turnout is slightly different in that their points are sprung and they assert that this spring helps maintain reliable electrical contact. You may also want to consider this option if you will remove this spring when using their turnout with a slow motion switch machine.

SUGGESTION #2-5: Making a BK Enterprises Turnout DCC Friendly.

I used both Atlas code 55 and Micro engineering turnouts on my recent N scale layout and preferred the Atlas over the ME.. The ME frog was hard to solder a feeder wire to but the Atlas has a nice little tab for that purpose. I also like the Atlas #10 turnouts as they are long and smooth running. When I was building the N layout Atlas has some supply problems but eventually I found turnouts to ...
