In the actual train timetable possible possession allocations are scheduled for maintenance so that it should not affect too much the regular train service. Many countries use timetabling software (e.g. Viriato (6), Opentrack (7)) for finding free intervals or periods with less impact to the train operators.

Scheduling Preventive Railway Maintenance Activities

Abstract. An important aspect of infrastructure management is the scheduling of maintenance tasks, which implies the allocation of tasks to different crews or machines and the determination of an execution order. To this end, different aspects have to be considered. On the one hand, the maintenance operator is interested in reducing direct maintenance costs, e.g. travel costs.
