The photographer would shoot two frames (one for safety) and count every one in with a “1..2..3...say cheese” my grade one teacher Mrs. Witchell was way too cool to do cheese. She busted out her own version of Blue Steel instead. Respect. Sadly this style of posing large groups is still pretty much the norm.

Some pointers on large group poses: – Put taller people towards the back and in the center, shorter people in front and on sides, if you are doing a standing pose. – Try not to make the group photo too deep. This will keep all faces in focus. – Chins up slightly for no double chins. – Have adults hold wiggly toddlers and babies.

17 Dos and Don'ts for Capturing Your Amazing Group Photo

Best Poses for Group Photos. Posing a single person can be challenging enough. For groups, you have to multiply that challenge by how many people are in the image. First, before you attempt to pose a large group for a photo, make sure you understand how to pose a single person.
