One of Pink’s main points is the increased importance of problem finding versus problem solving. He offers this analogy: If the sales process is a timeline that goes from 0 to 100, buyers are coming in at 60 or 70, rather than 5 or 10.

Are you a problem finder or a problem solver? Why it matters.

Good problem solvers are good thinkers. They have less drama and problems to begin with and don't get overly emotional when faced with a problem. They usually see problems as challenges and life experiences and try to stand above them, objectively.
