Crito With Introduction And Analysis

Crito considers death one of the worst things that can befall a person, but Socrates disagrees. Because of this disagreement, Crito is much more afraid of the punishments the public can inflict than Socrates is. This disagreement uncovers the first argumentative distinction between the two characters’ worldviews.

Crito by Plato Plot Summary | LitCharts

Crito says that "the opinion of the many" would judge us wrong if we didn't help you (and anyone in your position would agree that you ought to escape). Socrates notes that SOME OPINION IS RIGHT AND SOME OPINION IS WRONG. It is not simply a matter of mere opinion, but of CORRECT OPINION. The authority in this case is the ACTUAL TRUTH of the matter.

Analysis of the Crito - Carnegie Mellon University

Crito offers a number of arguments to justify his escape, consisting of the pity he would withstand from the public for letting his buddy die, and the poor example it would set for the kids of Athens. However, Socrates carefully analyzes each of Crito’s arguments for escaping, and proves them invalid through logic and deductive reasoning.
