"Guiri" doesn't sound like a Spanish word. There are a couple of theories relating to the origin of the word “guiri”. The most widely accepted is that it was first coined in the 19th century during Spain’s Carlist Wars, a series of civil wars fought between the Carlists, the supporters of royal Infante Carlos, and the Cristinos, the followers of Queen María Cristina de Borbón.

The Spanish have taken the siesta very seriously, even going so far as having a sleeping competition in its honor. Throughout history, there have been many good reasons for having a siesta time. But, on a normal day, in most cities, do the Spanish really go to sleep at this time? And, are the reasons for having a siesta time fading?
