The Greek Imperative Mood in the New Testament: A ...

There are three moods in Greek: the indicative, the subjunctive and the imperative. The infinitive and the participle are considered as moods as well. The indicative mood (οριστική) presents the action or the event as something real or certain, in other words as an objective fact. This mood is to be found in all tenses.

Greek Grammar verb moods

An imperative verb is a verb used as a command or instruction. As noted in lesson 1 of this course, there has not been unanimity regarding the classification of the imperative as a mood. But because we have been discussing mood in terms of contingency, it makes sense to think of the imperative as a mood. When you instruct or command someone to do something, the performance of the instructed action is contingent upon the person's compliance.
