The Idea Of History

In R.G. Collingwood His last book, The Idea of History (1946), proposed history as a discipline in which one relives the past in one's own mind. Only by immersing oneself in the mental actions behind events, by rethinking the past within the context of one's own experience, can the historian discover...

At times, 'ending poverty' may seem to be nothing more than a 'symbolic' goal, with little done to achieve the aim. This column provides a short history of the idea of ending poverty as a 'motivational' goal, from the intellectual germ of the modern idea of distributive justice in the late 18th century to the UN's first Sustainable Development Goal of ending "extreme poverty"

The history of the idea of race. Race as a categorizing term referring to human beings was first used in the English language in the late 16th century. Until the 18th century it had a generalized meaning similar to other classifying terms such as type, sort, or kind. Occasional literature of Shakespeare's time referred to a "race of saints" or "a race of bishops."

Race - The history of the idea of race | Britannica

Intellectual history (also the history of ideas) is the study of the history of human thought and of intellectuals, the men and women who conceptualised and discussed, wrote about and concerned themselves with ideas.

Intellectual history - Wikipedia

All history is the history of thought ; and when an historian says that a man is in a certain situation this is the same as saying that he thinks he is in this situation. The hard facts of the situation, which it is so important for him to face, are the hard facts of the way in which he conceives the situation.
