Introduction. Originally the terms acid and base referred to taste. The practice of classifying substances according to their acidic (sour) or basic (alkaline or bitter) properties dates back to ancient times. An acid was something with a sour taste, such as lemon juice, and a base was something with a bitter taste, such as tonic water.

An acid-base titration is a neutralization reaction that is performed in the lab in order to determine an unknown concentration (Molarity) of acid or base. As long as the concentration of one of the solutions is known, the concentration of the other reaction can be obtained through titration. In a titration reaction, the moles of acid equal the moles of base at the equivalence point.
