D 4169 has been rigorously analyzed ever since it was approved over 20 years ago, and has occupied a fixed location on every D10 meeting agenda since. Currently, the addition of several new hazard elements are being considered, including high altitude simulation, and a radical change to the existing small package distribution cycle is under way. The standard won the ASTM Dudley Medal in 1995 and promises to continue for the foreseeable future as Committee D10's most prestigious standard.
