Time And The Art Of

"Time and the Art of Living" is a philosophical essay about the relationship between two facts: that we each "strut and fret upon the stage" for a terrifyingly short slice of objective time, and that subjective time, our experience of temporality, is deeply informed by our chosen activities and our character.

Time and the Art of Living: Grudin, Prof Robert ...

Time and movement in art are closely linked. Time, however, is an abstract concept, with cultural and historical implications. It does not have the physicality that movement does. Time-based artwork is more ephemeral. Linear vs. circular, or cyclical time. In the concept of linear time there is a beginning (the past), and an end (the future). Between the two is the present, which is always moving forward.
