Rates and equilibrium - Flashcards in GCSE Chemistry

When the rates of the forward and reverse reactions have become equal to one another, the reaction has achieved a state of balance. Chemical equilibrium is the state of a system in which the rate of the forward reaction is equal to the rate of the reverse reaction. Figure \(\PageIndex{1}\): Equilibrium in reaction: $\text{H}_2(\text{g}) + \text{I}_2(\text{g}) \rightleftharpoons 2\text{HI}(\text{g})$.

6.2: Chemical Equilibrium - Chemistry LibreTexts

In a chemical reaction, chemical equilibrium is the state in which the forward reaction rate and the reverse reaction rate are equal. The result of this equilibrium is that the concentrations of the reactants and the products do not change. However, just because concentrations aren't changing does not mean that all chemical reaction has ceased.

Equilibrium - Reversible reactions - GCSE Chemistry ...

Chemical reactions are reversible and may reach a dynamic equilibrium. The position of equilibrium of a reversible reaction can be altered by changing the reaction conditions.

Changing the position of equilibrium - Higher - Reversible ...

At equilibrium, the quantities of everything present in the mixture remain constant, although the reactions are still continuing. This is because the rates of the forward and the back reactions are equal.

an introduction to chemical equilibria

We deduce it above from a simple model for the concentration dependence of elementary-reaction rates. In doing so, we use the criterion that the time rate of change of any concentration must be zero at equilibrium. Clearly, this is a necessary condition; if any concentration is changing with time, the reaction is not at equilibrium.

5: Chemical Kinetics, Reaction Mechanisms, and Chemical ...

In a chemical reaction, chemical equilibrium is the state in which both reactants and products are present in concentrations which have no further tendency to change with time, so that there is no observable change in the properties of the system. This state results when the forward reaction proceeds at the same rate as the reverse reaction. The reaction rates of the forward and backward reactions are generally not zero, but equal. Thus, there are no net changes in the concentrations of the reactants.

Chemical equilibrium - Wikipedia

The equilibrium expression for a chemical reaction may be expressed in terms of the concentration of the products and reactants. Only chemical species in the aqueous and gaseous phases are included in the equilibrium expression because the concentrations of liquids and solids does not change. For the chemical reaction: $jA + kB \rightarrow lC + mD$

9: Rate of Reaction | A* Chemistry

The presence of a catalyst helps a reaction proceed more quickly to equilibrium. Aside from catalysts, other chemical species can affect a reaction. The number of hydrogen ions (the pH of aqueous solutions) can alter a reaction rate.

Factors That Affect the Chemical Reaction Rate

Chemical equilibrium is the condition in which the forward and backward rates of a reversible reaction occur at the same rate. This condition is dependent on the reaction environment: any change in temperature or pressure may cause the reaction to shift its equilibrium position towards the reactants or products (towards the left or the right).
