A Zoroastrian perspective on organ donation. Zoroastrians believe that after life on Earth, the immortal human soul is judged by God as to whether it did more good deeds than evil during its lifetime. Immortal souls that balance in favour of good over evil go to what Zarathustra referred to simply as the "best existence" - or heaven - and those immortal souls that balance in favour of evil go to the "worst existence" - or hell, and remain there until the end of time.
