Strange Tools Art And Human

In Strange Tools: Art and Human Nature, the philosopher and cognitive scientist Alva Noë argues that our obsession with works of art has gotten in the way of understanding how art works on us. For Noë, art isn't a phenomenon in need of an explanation but a mode of research, a method of investigating what makes us human--a strange tool.

Strange Tools: Art and Human Nature - Alva Noë

So a theory of art that implies that architecture has a problematic standing among the arts is a problematic theory of art. However, despite the exaggeration, works of art are strange tools, because they combine a communicative function with a peculiar absorption in the medium in which they communicate. The most poignant image of this absorption, of its profound and disturbing power, is Shakespeare’s image of the dyer’s hand:
