Singular Integral Equations: Boundary Problems Of Function ...

One of the basic problems in the theory of singular integral equations is the regularization problem, that is, the problem of reducing a singular integral equation to a Fredholm equation. Let E and E_{-1} be Banach spaces, which may coincide, and let $A: E \rightarrow E_{-1}$ be a bounded linear operator.

The singular integrals occur in all BEM problems to calculate the boundary unknown values. The near singular integrals, as is mentioned in [1, 2], occur always in two situations; first one is known as boundary layer effect problems when the physical quantities at the interior points very close to boundary are calculated. The other one is named as thin body effect problems when the thickness of the considered domain is small.

This chapter presents one of the most important theoretical applications of the Riemann boundary value problem—the investigation of singular integral equations with Cauchy kernel. As the Riemann boundary value problem has been mostly considered for closed contours only, the integral in the integral equations under review in the chapter are taken along contours of the same kind.

A considerable part of the book is devoted to applications to the solution of numerous problems of potential theory, the theory of elasticity and other sections of mathematical physics.

Solve the singular integral equation of the first kind, involving a semiinfinite interval
with a gap, as given by $b_1 \int_{a_1}^{b_1} \psi(t) dt + \int_{c_1}^{\infty} \psi(t) dt = g(x), x \in (a_1, b_1) \cup (c_1, \infty)$.
Solution: Taking
limit as $d_1 \rightarrow \infty$, keeping x fixed, in Equation 179, we obtain $\int_{a_1}^{b_1} \frac{1}{x-t} \psi(t) dt + \int_{c_1}^{\infty} \frac{1}{x-t} \psi(t) dt = \sqrt{(x-a_1)(x-b_1)}$
