Dynamic Analysis - University of Alberta

Transient dynamic analysis is a technique used to determine the dynamic response of a structure under a time-varying load. The time frame for this type of analysis is such that inertia

You can perform a transient structural analysis (also called time-history analysis) in the Mechanical application using the transient structural analysis that specifically uses the ANSYS Mechanical APDL solver. This type of analysis is used to determine the dynamic response of a structure under the action of any general time-dependent loads.

Difference Between Static and Transient Analysis ...

Implicit solvers are typically used for transient structural analysis and use $P=Kx$ and invert stiffness matrix to solve. In the case of longer duration loads (two or three times the natural period of your structure or longer) your structure will have time to deform according to the load (near quasi-static) and an implicit solver for a transient structural analysis will easily capture this.
