And Climeworks' recent success has many wondering how much of a role direct air capture has in solving global climate change. That's what the company set its sights on from the outset.

Can direct air capture make a real impact on climate change?

Air changes per hour, abbreviated ACPH or ACH, or air change rate is a measure of the air volume added to or removed from a space in one hour, divided by the volume of the space. If the air in the space is either uniform or perfectly mixed, air changes per hour is a measure of how many times the air within a defined space is replaced each hour.

Air chilling - Meyn

Air chilling involves cooling the meat directly after butchering and prior to rigor mortis setting in. So, the process has to be started within a short period after the kill, like 11 mins. I think. Also, the meat should not be frozen for 24-48 hours after kill. The reason is that the meat will be tough due to rigor mortis. The muscles need to relax before freezing. So, air chilling takes place around 33 degrees F. All of this is available online.
