Mooting: What is it and why take part? | Oxford Law Faculty

Mooting is the oral presentation of a legal issue or problem against an opposing counsel and before a judge. It comprises two pairs of student advocates, who take on the role of barristers. They each argue a fictitious legal appeal case in front of a judge, normally a lecturer or practising lawyer. It is perhaps the closest experience that a student can have whilst at university to appearing in court.

In the world of mooting, however, the legal-logical correctness of a mooter's submissions is to an extent subservient to the advocacy skills with which it is prosecuted. It is this need for elegance as well as correctness therefore that distinguishes mooting from mere advocacy. It also highlights the need for effective coaching as a separate requirement from the acquisition of the necessary legal knowledge to be the author of robust and correct legal arguments.

Better coaching with regard to communication was the second most prominent goal, while resilience, innovative thinking and emotional intelligence also ranked highly. Companies were less worried about their employees improving their customer advocacy skills, leading for inclusion and getting up to speed with their workload as areas that required further coaching.
