Corrosion Control For Offshore Structures

Corrosion Control for Offshore Structures places major emphasis on the popular use of cathodic protection (CP) combined with high efficiency coating to prevent subsea corrosion. This reference begins with the fundamental science of corrosion and structures and then moves on to cover more advanced topics such as cathodic protection, coating as corrosion prevention using mill applied coatings, field applications, and the advantages and limitations of some common coating systems.

Corrosion control for offshore structures : cathodic ...

Control of corrosion on offshore structures is necessary to sustain oil and gas production, provide safe working and living areas, and avoid potential harm to the environment. For this standard, "offshore structures" includes metallic offshore structures such as fixed-leg platforms, tension-leg platforms (TLPs), semisubmersibles, spar platforms, and floating production storage and offloading vessels (FPSOs).

If corrosion is the number one enemy of offshore structures, pipeline coatings are the first line of defense. That's why it's crucial to choose the right coating. Protecting your structures the right way will help prevent corrosion and maintain pipeline integrity over the long-term.

Marine Structures: Offshore Corrosion Protection 101 ...

Corrosion control is therefore one of the key issues for offshore assets. For conversions such as FPSOs, usually based on the hull of a VLCC (Very Large Crude Carrier), corrosion started when the hull was first built – often 20 years earlier or more – and must be dealt with before the asset leaves the yard.

Corrosion management critical to long life of offshore ...

This chapter discusses the ways to protect offshore structures for oil and gas production, against corrosion. The aspects that are considered in relation to offshore structures, include,: economics, environments and corrosion control, maintenance, design, fouling, hot riser corrosion, down hole corrosion, 'sweet' and 'sour' corrosion, sulfide stress cracking, and corrosion fatigue.
