Industrial Growth and Population Change by E.A. Wrigley

This gives some measure of the difference between the two population revolutions of human history: there has been a dramatic increase not simply in population but in the rate of increase of population since industrialization took hold. Between 1650 and 1850 the average annual rate of increase of the world's population doubled; it doubled again by the 1920s, and it more than doubled, once more, by the 1970s.
