Human Rights And Ethical Considerations

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights was drafted in a post World War II era, when gender bias still occurred, indigenous people issues were under the radar, and logical conclusions from ethical analysis were still prevented from being acted upon, mainly as a result of religious influence. As religious influence has decreased, it is clear that some rights, such as an individual's right to die with dignity (euthanasia), the right to not have religions imposed on people (a freedom of ...
