Re: Dimension 4600i Memory Upgrade
Since your current memory is clocked at 333, your new memory will also be clocked at 333. The memory controller will always clock the memory at the rate of the slowest module installed. I'm guessing that you have a processor that uses an FSB of 533 MHz.

All the 4600 models will take a socket 478 CPU at 800 MHz, up to 3.0GHz and the later model 4600 will take the 3.2GHz and 3.4GHz processors, this does not offer much of a boost over the 3.0GHz. The SL7E6 should be compatible. If you have PC2700 memory, when you install a Prescott, you may want to replace it with PC3200.
