Scottsboro book by Ellen Feldman - ThriftBooks

On March 25, 1931, nine black youths were riding the Alabama Great Southern freight train when they got into an altercation with a group of angry white men. When the nine "Negroes," some of whom were in their early teens, got off the train, they were arrested for allegedly raping two white women. In this semi-fictionalized account, Ellen Feldman provides the shocking details of a shameful episode in our nation's history, putting the events into their political, social, and economic context.
