Field vs Lab experiments. Field experiments are carried out in the real world, away from a laboratory. The advantage of this type of experiment is that it is very practical. Field experiments also allow experiments to take place, with no confounding variables being introduced. Field experiments are often used to study participant's behaviour when they have no idea they are being watched.

Field vs Laboratory Experiments | mypsychjournal

Field Experiments. Experiments look for the effect that manipulated variables (independent variables) have on measured variables (dependent variables), i.e. causal effects. Field experiments are conducted in a natural setting (e.g. at a sports event or on public transport), as opposed to the artificial environment created in laboratory experiments. Some variables cannot be controlled due to the unpredictability of these real-life settings (e.g. the public interacting with participants), but ...
