Well, nothing complicating happens in the life after death. You just move out of your body and reach a plane of existence known as the Astral World. You will be put before an angel of death who administers the next life suitable for you. The decision to whether to send you to go up to heaven, to stay there in the Astral world, to be reborn again into this world or to be sent elsewhere to a different planet for another birth all depends to the karma of the particular soul.

What Happens To Your Soul After Death - Wise Life Advice

The cycle of death and rebirth is eternal according to some Hindus, but others say it persists only until the soul has attained karmic perfection, thus merging with the Absolute (brahman). Buddhism negates the concept not only of the individual self but of the atman as well, asserting that any sense of having an individual eternal soul or of partaking in a persistent universal self is illusory.

Soul | religion and philosophy | Britannica

The idea is that upon death, our soul or consciousness separates from the body and then undergoes a process where its memory is wiped clean and it is recycled – reincarnated – into another body to repeat the same process. In this way the Earth becomes a literal prison planet from which it's very difficult to escape.
