On the cross, Jesus once again stands between heaven and earth but this time it is to suffer the sword of the Lord, not wield it. He stands between a righteous God and a fallen creation to endure all of God's just anger over sin. He dies that you might live. He lives that you might never die. No, nothing about that is fair.

Heaven and earth—God's space and humans' space—were originally united as one. When humanity chose to go their own way, those two spaces were driven apart. But Jesus made a way for the two spaces to be one again. Right now we can experience the overlap between heaven and earth, but one day soon we will see the two spaces fully reunited ...
