The Light And Dark Mikhail

The light is Sashenka, a girl, representing life while Volodenka represents the dark and death. This is just my point of view, as the letters from Sashenka is more happy while Volodenka's is more about death. The story moves between Russia and China, where Sashenka still lives there and Volodenka is fighting a war.

Book Review: 'The Light and the Dark' by Mikhail Shiskin - WSJ

Mikhail Shishkin: Письмовник (The Light and the Dark) The English title of this book gives us a clue to what the general theme of this book is, namely that, in life, there is light and dark, though in Shishkin’s novels, it tends to be more dark than light as, in his other book translated into English, Венерин Волос (Maidenhair).

Shishkin: The Light and the Dark | The Modern Novel

The Light and the Dark is an epistolary novel, consisting entirely of the letters Volodya/Volodenka and Sashka/Sashenka write to each other -- he from his military duty in China (mainly in Tientsin/Tianjin, at the turn of the last century, during the Boxer Rebellion), she from back home in Russia. They are clearly writing to each other, yet their letters are not the usual back-and-forth of correspondence; indeed, it appears practically none of their communications actually reach each other.

Published as Pismovnik (“Letter Book”) in the original Russian, Mikhail Shishkin’s The Light and the Dark is a staggeringly ambitious epistolary novel about two lovers and their unwavering commitment to their union. This novel, by award winning Russian author Mikhail Shishkin, takes the form of letters between Sashsa (or Sashenka) and Vovka (or Volodenka/Volodya). However, what at first appears to be a typical love affair soon has the sense of something quite out of the ordinary.
