Mass Communication in Canada: Gasher, Mike, Skinner, David ...

The term mass media refers to any means or technology used to communicate a message to large groups of people. Popular forms of mass media include television, the Internet, and newspapers. Mass media are specifically intended to reach larger audiences. The term is often divided into two broad categories: that of electronic mass media and that of print mass media.

Mass media in Canada - Wikipedia

Mass communication is defined as a process where an organization, a group or an individual sends a message to a large organization or a group via a suitable communication channel. The sender is most often a professional communicator. The message is sent to the general public or a group of heterogeneous and anonymous people via print media, social media, billboards, magazines, internet, films ...
