Freud's Id, Ego, and Superego - Verywell Mind

The ego is the mind's identity of our own construction, an identity which is false. We are more than just the mind. If we take all the beliefs of what we are - beliefs about our personality, talents, and abilities - we have the structure of our ego. These talents, abilities and aspects of our personality will be attributes of our skills, but the mental construct of our "self" is artificial.

What Is The Ego? | The Answer May Surprise You | Pathway ...

The ego is the identification of your awareness-consciousness with your physical body, emotions and thoughts. In order to express itself in the outside world, your awareness-consciousness needs the physical body, the emotions and the thoughts, and identifies itself with them. This creates the ego. Your thoughts evoke feelings and desires, which lead to action.
